ROWING JEALOUSY BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST.

(From the Montgomery Mail.)

If it is true that the West has got about everything else,' the reason is she is possessed of the best qualified men for various high offices. The West has got into the habit of producing first-class men for civil as well as military employment. The brains and enterprise of the East are chiefly absorbed in money-getting, stock-jobbing, and gambling in Wall-street. During the war the East was never able to push the heels out of sight of the Potomac; while the West conquered them in twelve States. The intellect of the East was too much engrossed in filling Government contracts, increasing the tariff, and other gainful pursuits, to develop a high order of military talent or statesmanship; and they should not now complain if the West overthrows them in ability for public affairs as well as in martial renown."

to the fact that they have permitted the hands of adventurers who are in close alliance with the moneyed power and high tariff interests of the East. The New York Tribune is the text-book of carpet-baggers of the South. If the West desires alliance with the South, the sooner she permits the whites of this section to govern themselves the better. To-day the negroes of the South are the allies of the East in the approaching contest with the West.

following is an extract from a pastoral letter of Ullathorne, read in the Roman Catholic Church of Birmingham :—

You are not ignorant, my brethren, that for a considerable time past, the agents of Fenianism have been carrying on their operations in Birmingham, and have been doing their best to corrupt their principles, and to enrol members in the Fenian Society, and to excite to the commission of the most atrocious crimes, and to cover those proceedings; and in the pretence that this society is working in the interests of both your faith and your nationality, you expose to the contempt of your fellow countrymen the sacredness of the Church, and of cutting yourselves off from the Sacraments, but also of injuring that national religion which this society professes to cherish and to protect. You will not fail to see that this speaking in the name of the Church, and of the Church of St. James, With what that society may or may not do in America or elsewhere, I have nothing to do; but I know that in England, and especially in this country, the agents of Fenianism have done more than bring it under the condemnation of the Holy See, and that deprive its members of their right to the Sacraments, and the clergy of their authority to administer them. I know that the agents of Fenianism have withdrawn from the society and abandon their engagements to it. The law of the Church is this: that whoever there is a secret society, involving a plot against the life of a sovereign, or against the safety of a nation, together, whether that society is bound together by oaths, or by an oath, or even without an oath, so as that society binds its members to secrecy, and to the commission of crimes, such as the violation of her law; and as we have said, its members are forbidden the Sacraments. Hence in my Advent Pastoral has served as a text to let out the spirit of Fenianism, as it is called by the Church of Rome; that Pastors tremble in the condition of disorder, immorality, and infidelity which so large a portion of Europe has been brought, chiefly through the action of secret and evil societies, to the verge of ruin, and to the overthrow of sovereigns and statesmen, who, deaf he warning voice of the Church, fostered and carried off these corrupt societies against the great interests of the human race. The first of these occurrences the following sentence—"The greater the lawlessness of the age, the more the agents of Fenianism, over which the Pope and the Holy See have presided, is now undermined by the agents of Fenianism, who are now recruiting and multiplying numbers of dupes, and brended with them to enter in secret societies, Freemasonry, Carbonarism, and the like, aiming with anti-christian fury at the overthrow of the throne, and the destruction of the Kingdom of all Divine as of all human authority and of all religion. This sentence the agents of Fenianism have mangled and perverted, and used in fragments to excite the passions of the people, and to lead the Bishop had been attacking them with insult, and saying them with being enemies of the Church—a wholly untrue thing. But in the first place, the agents of Fenianism were speaking in the secret name of the Church of Rome, was speaking in the name of the Church of St. James. In the second place, I spoke of this anti-christian fury as attacking those societies, taking the whole of them

...the members of those societies as well as with us against the Church, but only of those of those societies, the members being treated as their dupes. It is a measure of that which theologians call a connotation in globo, the lump; the words of connotation are therefore intelligible in their full sense to all secret societies together, but only in part to any one particular society, as mentioned. A part of what is common to all is mentioned. A part of what is com-ard in the censure applies to the heads of each ral society, and the whole to the whole of the ists of them taken together. Amongst these secret istics I throw in as examples:—Fr emasonry, Car-terism, and Penitensism—and for the truth of the

as as applied especially to Penitensism, what is reerds is, that the heads of that secret society should come way oppose the Church: and a'n, at least in e souls, at its destruction. A id this is precisely

It does. It is shrewd policy on the part of the Jesuits and agents of this secret society, when they are themselves pointed out and censured by the authorities of the Church, to make it appear that it is the fault of the people, even a whole nation, that is attacked; if they succeed in this, they escape, and their judges at the bar in the place of the criminal. This is what they first retorted upon the Cardinal Archbishop of Dublin, next upon the Archbishop of Strasbourg, and now upon the Bishop of Breslau.

...All this, however, tends but to prove the fact that animates the br brats of these agents of destruction. When they attempt to screen themselves by putting the very bishop who denounces their proceedings, as shields, even as shields on which they are painted hateful face, to protect the Irish people themselves; that people, so faithful, and so acute, and not fail to open their eyes, and to understand that at all this means. Unhappily, the heads and ants of this secret society in Birmingham have been much proud of acting against the Church.

 They have sworn Catholic into a treasonable society and have bound them to take up arms and to fight whenever they are commanded to do so. Thus they are not only broken the law, but have induced others to break the law, not only of the State but also of the Church. They have not only deprived themselves, but they have deprived others also of their

And their whole aim and effort is to bring as many souls as they can into the same condition. But the last attempt of these persons was directly aimed at creating division and trouble between the Catholics and the Birminghams and their Bishop. Thanks to the wisdom and loyalty of the Catholics themselves, this attempt not only failed, but it brought out the strongest expression of devotedness that I ever received from them. The week before the Reunion a more than usual number of letters were poured into the page of the Universal News, bearing emphatically the signature of your Bishop; and 'amongst them' was one professing to be signed by 'A High Priest,' although no one believed that the author was a priest, and the Editor of that letter was to exert the Irish Catholicism in their feelings towards their Bishop, who was to divide, by assuming themselves. But this was not ret Society strove to persuade a considerable number of Irish Catholics to join in calling upon the archbishop, when he took the chair, to retract his pastoral letter, and if he did not do so, to retire in a body from the meeting. But here, again, the good sense of the people defeated the aim of those agents, and had no resource left but to throw themselves with good grace as they might into the general festivity.

future that I recall these things of the past, which are otherwise far better buried in forgetfulness. In my eagerness to defend your Bishop with the Irish people of his flock, these persons have thought well to charge him with ignorance of their history, their wrongs, and their sufferings. And by way of backing up their charge, they have quoted the words of the Father teller, who in his long letter is bold enough to defend the principles involved in this sacred agonizing death.

the Holy See has condemned. Happily this is not a subject of mine, and so I leave him to his ecclesiastical superiors. Neither justice nor mercy will let me suffer his impression to be left even in the smallest portion of those who are committed to pastoral care. But does it really at this day appear to be stated that for nearly forty years I have been the devoted servant of the Irish people? Can it be unknown that from the twenty-fourth to this pre-sixty-third year of my life, from my vigorous to my grey hairs, I have given my energies to the welfare of that people? From 1832 to 1840 I was amongst the men transported for the affairs of Ireland amongst the men who, under all sorts of pretexts, were transported for O'Connell's famous Clare petition, and amongst men transported from parts of Ireland, almost as often for political as for criminal causes. I conversed with those men, knew their most secret sorrows,

...the quarters of a century of the history of the Irish people. Those men were wont to say that if I looked at an Englishman I felt like an fishman. It is not true to say what I did to mitigate their material sufferings as well as to provide for their spiritual needs; what help I brought them from their own country in pieces, sisters of charity, and teachers; and that I wrote in their defence; what share I had, and what a cost of suffering to myself, in bringing that terrible system of transportation itself to an end. Let me enough to say that my strong constitution was broken down in the service of this Irish people, and that I spent the best years of my life in labouring to hundreds of twenty thousand Irishmen, the mission had been brought about through the mismanagement of their country. But it was amongst them that I learnt to understand the evil results of secret societies; and the Irish people have been the victims of the same, when I have seen the bishops and clergy, and closing their eyes to the society's condemnation, they have followed the ever-tempting, and but too successful, policy of turning their backs against a united and irresistible force. With that weight which experience gives the victims of secret societies give, let me now tell you how I have been brought to see that the cause, and misery, to those who engage in them? Ireland had a great leader, one of those colossal figures, but rarely, it was neither by breaking the chains, but by breaking the shackles, that he accomplished his great objects. He was as powerful in opposing all secret societies as he was in favour of redressing the country's wrongs. He was weary of the people, and he broke the chains of the enemy; and that nothing is worth giving, nothing is blessed, that is gained by bloodshed. He was weary of the blood of his people, and he said to you from evil, I remain, my dear brethren, in affectional affection, W. WILLIAM BERNARD, Bishop Birmingham. — Birmingham, February 20th, 1869.

the will of the late eminent astronomer, Sir James, of which an account is published in a new popular magazine called the Register, contains an ironic bequest. "The testator," we read, "has pocket chronometer each to the Earls of Shaftesbury and Rose, in the fullest confidence that they carry them in the place where he (the deceased) the habit of carrying his," namely, in the pan-letter from Rome says that the Pope is in detest the diminution of his revenues, caused by the fish revolution. His Holiness was wont to extort one million and a half sterling from the pious every year, and contributions of different kinds levied from the faithful Spaniards under various names. The greater part of this stipend was suddenly cut off.

MAITLAND MARKETS.

Y, April 20.—The excitement caused by the late holiday, in respect of the Agricultural Show made the past rather broken one. Wholesale business has been, however, tolerably brisk; retail only middling. There are not many takers to notice in preceding quotations. Corn has a downward tendency. Lucerne hay remains quiet, at from 21 s to 25 s per ton, clean, 25 s to 40 s. Capri barley extremely scarce, 40 s to 50 s net bulk. Ryegrass 20 s to 25 s.

supply is not equal to the demand. Sugarcane remains firm at notations. In case there is no change to motion. Kerosene is still improving, so much so, that holders are keeping back, unwilling to operate at the present rates.

Demand for flour has somewhat lessened, but quotations are not changed. There has been a considerable quantity of wheat brought into the market, so the price of wheat is lower.

Cattle—A larger number to hand this week, and prices not so firm. Feed and water are now no longer a matter of worry for the squatters. We may therefore look forward with ease to the quality and condition of winter supplies. Prime are now quoted at from $25 to $26; cows, from $2 1/2 to 3 1/2, mainly prime.

Cattle.—The demand is continuously on the increase; it is more to the interest of holders to consign the surplus to stock agents for disposal, as beyond a doubt no better opportunity can offer than the present. The eagerness on the part of buyers to secure even a few odd lots is quite noticeable, and stores, mixed sexes, and of a good age, would realize as much as round lots. quotations: 2-year-olds, from $2 1/2 to $3; cows, from $2 1/2 to $3.

Sheep.—Market still glutted with untold numbers. The yearlings, except in a few cases, is only middling, whilst in others ing but good stores. The best are kept going from this season and nothing is sold. Best wethers, 15s to 16s. 50s. No sheep. No lambs in the market. It is next to impossible to quit at any price, indeed our graziers, who are, are quitting sheep and turning their attention exclusively, the extreme of what we experienced a few years ago, when cattle were being boiled down, and almost given away, to make room for sheep. Quotations cannot be given, nominally 100s., as, if in prime condition, realise 15s each. Sydney market being glutted, has a corresponding effect on our rates. Lambs, if well looked after, and brought

As in Pinus oleracea, the worth from seed to this class of stock, Pigs—A good description exists for the kind of stock, good porkers, fattened on corn, are worth from $2 to $3 1/2, bacon curing, the season being now sufficiently advanced to manufacturers to begin operations.

She Pigs—In good request at from $2 to 2 1/2, according to condition.

Horses—There is a better feeling amongst dealers, and transactions of some magnitude have already taken place, and the market is becoming concluded. Farmers and settlers can never do wrong in having good stanch horses, as this class of stock will always be in demand by shippers and others. Good upstanding colts,

TELEGRAPHIC MESSAGES.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.]

BATHURST.

TO-DAY, at the Circuit Court, Charles Smith was convicted upon two charges of larceny, and sentenced to twelve and six months imprisonment. The trial of James Mara, charged with shooting, commenced last night, was adjourned till this morning, and lasted till three o'clock, when the jury retired. They are still locked up. The criminal business will occupy the best part of next week.

MELBOURNE.

SATURDAY, 6 P.M.
The three Judges have decided that the Speaker's warrant, on which Messrs. Glass and Quarterman were committed to goal, was valid, and Glass has been released. There was great cheering outside the Court when the decision was given.

ADELAIDE.

SATURDAY.
A commercial club is likely to be successfully formed. Madame Bishop's last concert, yesterday, was crowded to excess. She visits the provinces next week. Business is dull. There is an improved demand for wheat at 2s. 10d. for export.

FIRE IN YORK STREET.

SHORTLY after 9 o'clock yesterday evening an alarm fire was given, flames having been seen issuing from the premises of the late Messrs. Arthur and Co. in York street. The fire was extinguished by the fire engine, and the damage was not great. The fire was caused by a candle which had been left burning in a box containing oil.

MANINGA RIVER SCANDAL.—A correspondent of the "Morning Herald" writes from Maningrida, N.T., that a scandalous story has been circulating in the Maningrida district. It is said that a man named John Smith, who was a member of the Maningrida district council, had been guilty of a most disgraceful act. It is said that he had been guilty of a most disgraceful act.

THE TEMPERANCE HALL.—The Temperance Hall was again crowded on Saturday evening, and an excellent musical concert was given. The programme consisted of a good selection of songs, recitations, &c. The Hon. George Allen occupied the chair.
